

Laura Toma is an expert in communication and learning with 15+ years of global experience, having lived and worked in four countries on three continents. With certifications in Design Thinking, Storytelling for Influence, and a recognized Google Innovator, Laura Toma has worked with companies across the world and with a variety of audiences, designing and delivering impactful communication campaigns and learning programs. Her two passions - communication and learning - come together in her communication workshops, which audiences of different ages, from different cultural backgrounds, industries, and levels of organizations find incredibly practical and relevant. She is currently leading Learning & Development projects at Compass Group Canada, global leader in food services, delivering value to associates working in all sectors.

